Atlanta Community Food Bank Stands Ready to Help our Texas Neighbors
Community Members Urged to Make Cash Donations to Feeding America

ATLANTA (Aug. 30, 2017) – The Atlanta Community Food Bank is working to support our partner food banks on the ground in Texas and parent organization Feeding America as they respond to the devastation caused by Hurricane Harvey. The best way to help is to make a financial donation to Feeding America, which will be directed to the multiple food banks and agencies supporting disaster relief. Feeding Texas is another local option for those who want to help. Financial donations will help food banks provide food, cleaning supplies and other emergency relief during recovery efforts.

The Atlanta Community Food Bank is not collecting donated items for Hurricane Harvey at this time because travel into and around Houston remains extremely limited. As a result, out-of-state supplies are not currently being accepted in Texas. We are in daily contact with FEMA and Feeding America to monitor the situation. As soon as roads in the impacted areas of Texas reopen, we will let the community know what items are needed and where it can be received. Of course, our thoughts and prayers are with all of those affected by this historic disaster.

About the Atlanta Community Food Bank

The Atlanta Community Food Bank works to end hunger across metro Atlanta and north Georgia with the food, people, and big ideas needed to make sure all members of our community have access to enough nourishment to live a healthy and productive life.

We all need nutritious food to live the lives we imagine. Yet far too many people in our own community experience hunger every day, including children, seniors, and working families.

Through more than 600 nonprofit partners, we help more than 755,000 people get healthy food every year. Our goal is that, by 2025, all hungry people in our service area will have access to the nutritious meals they need when they need them. It takes the power of our whole community to make that possible. Join us at ACFB.org.
